iPod Nano "Have you ever wondered what the little pocket on your jeans was for?" S.J.

Apple iPod Shrinks Again

(CBS) What would one of the world's greatest marketing geniuses do if he had an incredibly successful product? Well, Steve Jobs answered that question last Tuesday by killing the iPod mini - the world's best selling digital music player.

Instead of continuing to make those 3.5-ounce music players that are "only" a half-inch thick, Apple is now offering the iPod nano, which weighs 1.5 ounces and is no thicker than a #2 pencil. Despite its diminutive size, the new iPod has the same capacity (up to 4 gigabytes or 1,000 songs) as the original iPod mini and at least 14 hours of battery life.

iTunes 5

iTunes 5 now sports a new look and easier find functions, organization, and navigation. If you use iTunes, this download is recommended.

OS X Tip

Press "OPTION-CLICK" on a dock shortcut and that item will be located.

iTunes Phone

It Rings and Sings. With iTunes for your mobile phone, your songs live right alongside your contacts.

Think of it as musical multitasking. Hear a selection of your favorite tunes while sending text messages, taking pictures or checking your email. Listen through the included stereo headphones or out loud on the ROKR's speakers. You can even pause the music when your phone rings, so you won't miss any incoming calls.
